

The May Holy Land Quest

Israel to Jordan
May 4 – 15, 2014

*Earth's bones claim me now,
hold me close,
teach me my future song.*

Guides: Doug Van Houten & Sage Magdalene M.S.

SINCE ANCIENT TIMES, people seeking truth have journeyed into desert wilderness in order to sense the subtle and compelling mysteries lying beneath the surface of things. For those called to this quest, the voice of the desert may sound as hoof beats thrumming in the blood or the siren song of wind whooshing across vast sand plains and sighing through sinuous canyon turnings. Perhaps there is a deep longing for the stillness of Arabian nights lit by innumerable wheeling galaxies, and a visceral need for enough emptiness for the wild soul to finally make a shy appearance. Our destination, a region of sandstone cliffs, spectacular gorges, honeycombed weathering and enormous caverns has been a sanctuary and pilgrimage site for many thousands of years. Petroglyphs and rock inscriptions give testimony to ancient human presence. Could it be that this devastatingly mysterious landscape requires your presence in order to inscribe upon your heart the hieroglyph of your soul's true name?

AS A RITE OF INITIATION, the quest is a ceremonial descent to the underworld, in which you die to your familiar way of belonging to the world, uncover the passion and wisdom of your soul, and retrieve the gift that is yours alone to bring to the world, enhancing personal fulfillment and genuine service. The quest serves as a modern rite of initiation into your own soul and deeper layers of true adulthood.

AS A RITE OF PASSAGE, the quest facilitates the transition through a major crossroads of life. These crossroads — leaving home, mid-life crisis, career change, loss of a loved one, divorce, a healing crisis, spiritual crisis, or retirement — can be quite disorienting and emotionally traumatic. But these unavoidable and pivotal shifts are often the necessary threshold of all post-adolescent personal development and initiation.

OUR GROUP WILL MEET in Eilat, Israel, on the Bay of Aqaba at the northern tip of the Red Sea. We will cross the border into Jordan and travel north toward Petra, heading into convoluted canyons, leaving the homeland, and with peaceful, soulful intent, carry our prayers, grief and hopes into the unknown.

We will settle into our basecamp amid a colorful mosaic of red, orange, and beige canyon walls. For five days we will immerse in a synergistic mix of soulcraft practices and ceremonies including dream work, poetry, sacred rhythm and dance, talking staff council, deep imagery journeys and conversations with the wild inhabitants of this place. The breeze may carry the scent of aromatic herbs growing among the rocks, and our vision may be blessed by spring's display of wildflowers.

We may glimpse hare, fox, hyrax, jerboa, Arabian ibex, and lizard (or signs of their passing) as eagle, harrier, and Sinai Rosefinch draw graceful arcs across the sky.

The heart of the quest consists of the solo: three days and nights without human companionship in nature, fasting, engaging in personal ceremonies, saying yes to the mysteries of soul, tending the true mythos of your particular life, praising and grieving, and birthing a vision. Each person will discover a uniquely enchanting location for the solo: tiny oases among palms, wild figs, ferns and white broom, or striated rock walls carved by time into strange faces over sandy grottos etched with tracks of tiny creatures. Listening with the ears of the heart, attuning to the secret wavelengths of the deep imagination, within the holy wild surround beneath the waxing moon, anything and everything is possible.

Upon the return of those with the courage to go out alone, the group will gather and with reverence share the stories of the quest, gather the gifts from the underworld, and gently prepare to carry vibrant possibilities back to our people. There will be two days of integration and opportunities to give thanks and offer praise to all the wild desert beings.

If you feel allured and perhaps terrified by the beauty and mystery of desert vastness, if you are called toward the timeless ceremony of dying in order to become more fully alive, we invite you to journey with us to the sacred desert.
